Gentlemen.—I beg you will accept my thanks for your congratulatory address on my election as Alderman for your Ward.
The improvements to which you direct my attention shall have my best consideration, and I shall feel it my duty to urge my brother Councillors to carry out the same as soon as practicable, and for this as in every other measure for the advancement of the interests of the Ward they represent, and for the general improvement of the City. I confidently rely on the warm support and co-operation of all the Councillors for Cook Ward.
Allow me, gentlemen, to assure you I shall always be glad to receive any communication from the citizens of the Ward, pointing out from time to time the improvements most urgently required, as I think more frequent communication between the Councillors and their constituents would materially assist us in working the Corporation Act beneficially to all.

WRECK ON THE "SOVEREIGN."—The Directors of the Hunter River Steam Navigation Company are preparing a statement respecting the unfortunate steamer Sovereign, which they intend to lay before the public.

The Christina, hence, for Port Phillip, put into Botany Bay about midday yesterday wind bound.

The Frolic brings but little news. She fully corroborate the total loss of the Prima Donna, having passed several chests of tea floating, on the coast of Java, bended with her masts.

The Waterlily saw the brig Rosen, hence, entering the Tamar as she left Launceston. The Rosen, hence, arrived at Hobart Town on the 31st March.

The Shamrock spoke the schooner Thomas Lord at 8 p.m. on Saturday last, about 15 miles to the westward of Kent's Group—hence for Port Phillip.

The brig Rapin has taken on board a cargo of sea bids at Newcastle, and will sail thence for Bingo, now in a few days.

The barques Union and Sydney were to leave Launceston, for this port a few days after the Waterlily.

Captain Craig, of the barque Rookery, writes, as follows to the Portland Guardian, on the subject of the unpleasantness of Portland Bay as a harbour. Captain G. says:—"Having nearly completed my loading, I wish to know your readiness to pay my freight, with your roadstead and anchorage visiting here for the purpose. I arrived, on the 19th ultimo, should, on the 20th, moored the very first opportunity after, by 8 o'clock, with their anchors heavily south-south-west and north-north east from each other, viz., 8 fathoms of shalk; they will thus seem to clear anchors and an open passage to the sea south-east, and I certainly think that any vessel moderately well furnished with ground tackling would side in safety, the distance being only five or four fathoms, and the holding ground particularly good. The slaughter-house on the N.W. Blair's house, and the house on the N.E. point, with the centre of Julia Gruhkank's house, and a point for the starboard anchor, is a very good point.

The ill-fated Lydia Shaw having been got off at Belfast, leaked so much that it was necessary again to run her on shore. Mr. Griffith afterwards sold her, without lease, to Captain Calwards sold her, without lease, to Captain Calwards and he, when he got her matter, who intends breaking her up to get her materials for his new vessel.—Portland Gazette.

STEAM.

In papers lately received from South Australia we find some remarks upon the London Sub-Committee's Report, relative to the best route for steam-packets from England and India to the various settlements in Australia. These remarks are by no means a misrepresentation, as many have been hoped, however reluctant, of the Sub-Committee's sentiments, or of public opinion. On the contrary, the colonists of South Australia are not less precocious than aspiring, and will not be satisfied with a just adaptation of the proposed means of intercourse to circumstances as they are found, but they desire long before their time to be treated as the foremost men of the southern world. Not content with having secured for their twenty shillings all the mineral wealth that exists in their land from its surface down to the centre, they will be the same sum are possessors only of the grass and timber, the very coal being denied us, they must needs deprive us (if they could) of the advantages of our superior maritime position, and resist the just claims of our more numerous population, that of our more extensive and more valuable trade. This presumptuous and overambitious spirit is by no means commendable in our prosperous cousins, and we will show them that their depreciatory comments are wholly unsupported by facts.

The South Australian Gazette (27th February) insinuates, and (6th March) roundly asserts, that the Sub-Committee was composed "exclusively of gentlemen connected with Sydney," that they "obtruded themselves into the management of the business in London," "that they are determined to hook or crook to procure the adoption of the Torres Straits route to Sydney, leaving out all the western provinces, evidently deeming them well enough looked after if they are treated as the very insignificant dependencies of the great colony of squatters," "that the information they possess of the nautical portions of the subject is no better nor more correct than their knowledge of the condition and requirements of the province "of South Australia,—and "that consequently their report must be altogether worthless." On these grounds the South Australian Gazette publishes in its number of March last (volume only of the Report, which would have occupied five.

The South Australian (26th February and 2nd March) is not nearly so severe as the Gazette, for it prints the Report entire; yet it has also ventured to pronounce upon the character and connexions of gentlemen whose names are unknown to us as to the Gazette. "The Sub-Committee," it says, "evidently have laboured under great disadvantages in determining the best route. Its members appear to be either colonists of the Middle Districts of New South Wales, or persons intimately connected by interest with it. Their great object seems to be direct route to Sydney, to the prejudice of Swan River, South Australia, Port Phillip, and Van Diemen's Land. To this end they would, all their facts and model all their arguments." It accuses the Sub-Committee of promulgating "grossly inaccurate details."

In answer to all this we have to say that we know the names of the gentlemen (though these journalists do not) who were appointed to consider the highly important matter of steam communication, we know the colonies or settlements with which they are connected, and we know them to be gentlemen in every way (knowledge, interest, and respectability,) qualified for forming a fair and accurate judgment. There are amongst them colonists and connexions of the Middle Districts, and it would be strange if there were not, and there are amongst them colonists and connexions of the other settlements, and if anything there is in point of number a deficiency of the former. Here are the names, let the public judge! and, Oh! ye Adelaide editors, blush!

2. But it is evident our brethren beyond Lake Alexandrina have not seen the document from which these names are taken. To the above were afterwards added Mr. Evans Smith, connected with the Mauritius, and we believe another, giving the Great Western a still larger influence.

The South Australian Gazette goes on to argue that because these nice little craft the Dorset (99), the Rosina (121), the Phantom (157), and the Macoppa (we believe 200), make the voyage from Sydney to Adelaide, and nice nerve, in twelve days on the average, and long they hold their heads above water! and because all vessels leaving Adelaide for England now take the western route, and because steamers might weather the Leeuwin in six days, therefore, (for we find no other argument) the western route is the best. We have given some pains to the consideration of the various evidence on this question, particularly to that of the gentlemen examined by the Committee of our Legislative Council, and we have caused computations to be made for ourselves, and we find the results are in all cases far more in favour of the Torres Straits route than our opponents.

We refer to the Report of our Council published in the Herald of 31st October, and to our own article of 13th November, for a statement of these arguments, and we only ask our South Australian friends to lay them fairly side by side with the London Committee's Report, which was then quite unknown in the colony, and to mark their agreement.

3. But our worthy coadjutors in public instruction make a strange and bold attempt to carry the scale upon us in respect of produce, population, and trade.

The Gazette says:—

Even were the southern route determined upon, we should not be surprised—no one is ever surprised at what is said or done at Sydney—if some Quixotic liberal regulation would say that the Adelaide mail should be carried past and brought back by the first opportunity, that of course would be the shortest route to able

Her husband, taking some Dutch drops on the parts of not him to Dr. Mackellar, who gave an ointment to apply to the parts, but that was applied as directed; he lingered Friday afternoon, when he expired; he years of age. Frederick Mackellar, deceased as stated by the he was then labouring under severe of the chest and stomach; the skin hot, and the parts appeared very tongue; he prescribed what he considered Dutch drops and ointment the part of his fellow-citizens. We need only say here, that we do not expect it will be long, if a cities of which is professed for Dwarkanath by his friends be felt, before half a dozen scholars on the endowments fund will be found, as the lecture rooms of University College, London.

The evening, which have made the most noise in Calcutta, if not excited the whole interest, have been those connected with the first opium sale of the season, which came off on the 20th ultimo. It had, for some time previous, transpired that very extraordinary prices for opium items depended on the average price which the drug put up on that occasion would fetch and while speculation mainly was on the tiptoe to know the result, individuals were wrought to the highest pitch of excitement by the fearful stake which they had involved in it. To understand this, we must explain what is termed the opium gambling in the province at the Company's sales of quantities of the drug not for the purpose of exportation or fair trade in it, but for transfer of the right to enhanced prices, either under a previous contract into which they have been entrapped, or by China speculators who bid prices resulting on the market here. When the Company restricted themselves to a few sales in the year, with a larger number of chests at each, the gambling was carried to an enormous extent, the Englishmen from the Company were as recklessly made, that sometimes the auction average in Calcutta was higher than the highest China rates!

To limit in some degree this ruinous practice, and to put a stop to the mischief of the drug, the Government increased the number of sales to nine, to follow in monthly succession, and thus keep as equable flow of the material into the market. It appears, however, that a gigantic plan was concocted by some of the wealthiest Mercantile capitalists, to make a grand coup, which should not only be a revival from the business with befitting dignity. They accordingly, through their numerous ramifications, secured nearly very large number of parties to receive a certain quantity of opium from there parties at the price of 1400 rupees a chest, for the first opium sale of the season. It was known that scarcely 2000 chests would be put up, but by the secrecy with which operations were conducted, it is believed that contracts to be supplied with nearly 6000 chests were effected. The penalty for non-fulfilment of the contract was stipulated to be the amount by which the average price of the sale exceeded 1400 rupees. It subsequently got wind that the Mercantile Gentlemen had secured themselves, and by strenuous bidding got the average of the day up to 2000 rupees, which according to the existing contracts would have been done without requiringna deposit of more than some three or four lakhs. On the other hand, the penalty of 600 rupees a chest, assured according to the contracts, would have cost China upwards of 36 lakhs of rupees, out of which the deposit money, 200 rupees a chest, could have been well forfeited, and the drug sold thrown back entirely in the Government hands.

When the details of the scheme transpired, it was found that it was difficult to believe that the convention created by it among the gulls whose precedence had induced them to swallow the bait, seemed to be so easily overcome. Strong attempts were made to induce Government to interfere, but this was resolutely declined. The ingenuity of the victims then devised a method to get out of the scrape, and on the sale opening, the very first lot of five chests was by themselves bid up to Rs. 130,666 per chest! by which time the average was so advanced that the auction closed without a single lot being knocked down, and therefore without an average having been reached possible. Whatever the verbal discussions of the first day's sale from the first sale of the season will be legally held to exonerate the parties from the consequences of their contracts, will probably be legally decided: in the mean time, the farce played off at the expense of Government drew the attention of the authorities received to the regulations of the sale They have now been rendered far more stringent, and will as far as can be seen be effectual in putting down sham bar practices. The adjourned sale was held yesterday morning, and went off quietly, giving for Behar Opium, the average of Rs. 1793.6 9, and for Benares Rs. 1820 14.7.

IRELAND.

(From the Morning Chronicle.)

RESIGNATION OF THE ARBITRATION SOCIETY.

DUBLIN, NOVEMBER 26.—Resignations are still pouring in, on account of the suspension of the 14th rule of the Society, which prohibited anything in the shape of political discussion.

"It is understood that some of the leading members have forwarded communications, urgently recommending that the Society should retrace its steps, and restore this rule, at the only means of preventing the dissolution of the Society.

A meeting of the Council is now in progress, and it is not improbable that a proposition will be made, to be submitted at the next general half yearly meeting on the 12th of December next, for the restoration of the rule in question.

STATE OF THE COUNTRY.—CAMING OF THE MIDDLE CLASS.

The most alarming statements are still published as to the open trade in fire-arms, especially in the Counties of Tipperary and Limerick. The Liberal journal in Clonmel, the Tipperary Free Press, gives the following account of a night incursion at Cahir, in that town, which is the capital of the county:—

There is more business doing in the trade in gunpowder, blunderbusses, powder and shot, than in any other in this town. The gunsmiths are kept going day and night repairing arms, and the wholesale trade is unable to supply the demand of their customers. Day and night reports of gun-shots are heard throughout the country—in some localities volleys are discharged, which are the great terror of the peaceable inhabitants."

The Limerick Chronicle says:—"We gave early and frequent proof of the avidity of the Irish peasantry to arm themselves, at any cost and hazard. The facilities are now free of all restriction, and fresh arms of firearms in this city, never so extensive, is almost exclusively availed of by that large class of people. After Ballingrane was attacked, twenty-nine guns were bought up in the last week. The Birmingham trade was never so flourishing."

There are still many heartrending accounts of distress, especially in the western provinces, and which will inevitably lead to loudly remonstrate against public works, and to effectual steps to promote drainage, or other productive works, now presentment sessions are demanded, to contribute employment for the destitute labourers.

The only qualifying features in the provincial accounts are, the increased quantity of produced prices of food, and the continued existence of the relief committees.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE RENTS.

The Irish Government have issued the following proclamation:—

Castle, Dublin Castle, November 24, 1846.

Whereas it has been represented to the Lord-Lieutenant, that in the County of Clare, and in other instances, a party of about thirty men, unknown, armed with guns and pistols, after visiting the houses of Michael Grosse, Thomas Grosse, and Michael Grosse, and threatening them with death, if they should pay rent, proceeded to the house of John Grosse, armed and being refused admittance, discharged at him a gun loaded with ball, which wounded him, and caused his death immediately—the above outrages took place on the townland of Ballyvoe, parish of Aghare, and county of Longford. His Excellency, for the better apprehension of the parties, and the prevention of those outrages, is pleased hereby to offer a reward of ten pounds, to be paid by the Treasurer, to any the person or persons who actually committed the same, who shall, within six months from the date hereof, give information, and cause the ends of justice and conviction of all and proportionate rewards, to be paid by the Treasurer, thereto.

By His Excellency's command,
H. LAMBERTON.

The Newry Telegraph says:—"On Sunday night, or Monday morning, a quantity of Indian meal, which had been taken from a boat on the Newry Canal, at a place called the Maddin Bridge. The robbers managed to carry away fifteen sacks, containing two cwt. each."

Clonmel, Nov. 26.—On Monday, a person conveying a load of flour from this town to Kilfennale, was stopped by an armed party of men between Clonmel and Tenhard, who carried off four bags.

A cask of butter was taken from a poor woman in Carrick, on her way to market; the aforesaid was bringing it to the market to sell; she received a severe beating from the ruffians.

KING'S COUNTY.—PARSONSTOWN, NOV. 28.—Saturday night last a notice was posted at Cloncrew, signed the Blossington union, requiring the labouring population of the parish of Drumcullen to assemble on the four roads at the Pass on Monday morning to suggest means whereby the wants of the parish would be relieved, and subsequently about fifty persons assembled, and proceeded to the residences of Daniel Molloy, Esq., J.P., Clonbela, and Thomas Molloy, Esq., Hazelfield, Esq., each of whom they stated their wants. Both gentlemen stated that every possible exertion had been made to give employment to the poor. Some of the party said "that unless they got employment they would take the fat from off the land." A good many labourers were yesterday employed in making a new line of road in that parish.

SALE OF THE BLESSINGTON ESTATES.

The Dublin Evening Post says:—"We have heard that the lots sold have been purchased at rates varying from 25 to 27 years purchase: and although the property is well circumstanced, those prices must be considered very excellent, in the present circumstances of the country. Mr. Gresham, who resides on the Mountjoy estate, is the residuary legatee, and will be entitled to the residue of the entire Blessington property, after the claims of the creditors have been satisfied."

This day Master Litton renewed the sale of the Blessington estate, situate in the county of Tyrone. The townlands of Gortlungan, containing 866 acres, 3a. 24p., subject to a fee-farm rent of £1 per annum, producing a rental of £231 3s. 7d., subject to about £10, proportion of tithe rent-charge, and estimated at the annual value of £241, was the first lot put up for competition, and for which Mr. William Scott, of Omagh, offered £4000. A second bidder not being appeared, the offer was accepted. The town land of Gortnaskea, containing 347a. 2r. 2p., Ordnance survey, yearly rent £186 6s. 2d., subject to about £12 proportion of tithe rent-charge, and estimated at the annual value of £216, was the next lot in the order of sale, for which Mr. Norris, of Omagh, offered £3800, but the offer being under the value, as stated by Master Litton, it was refused. The townlands of Beagh, containing 739a. 3r. 17p., Ordnance survey, producing a rental of £515 17s. 9d., subject to a tithe rent-charge of £6 19s. 3d., and estimated at the annual value of £555 11s. 6d. was held by the parties at the value of £6000, and for which Mr. Scott, of Omagh, offered £3800, which was refused. These several townlands lie in the manors of Rash and New, the greatest part of Upper Strabane, and parish of Cappagh, in the county of Tyrone.

In those five lots of the Blessington estates no sale was effected.

SUPPLIES OF FOOD.

LIMERICK, NOV. 25.—For some weeks the supplies of grain from the county Clare have been stopped, but we are glad to learn that the trade is again resumed. This morning several loads of wheat were offered in this market from the neighbourhood of Scariff and O'Gunsellos.

Within the last week 14,439 barrels of oats were exported from this city to London and Glasgow, and in the same time 2210 barrels of oats were shipped from this port for the importation of Indian corn. 47,800 firkins of butter were shipped from this port since 1st July.

CARRICKTOWN, Monday.—Since the date of my last communication there have been some supplies of flour and meal. Last week the Nancy, Ballinskelligs, with forty-two tons of flour and meal, and the James and Ellen of the same port, with thirty-eight tons of meal, arrived at our pier; their cargoes were consigned to Mr. John Sullivan, of this town. Mr. Charles Sugrue, of Cork, sent down the smack St. Patrick with 36 tons of barley meal for his own tenantry.

A great reduction has taken place in the price of all sorts of provisions. Indian meal is now selling at 1s. 10½d. per stone, and when some other vessels that are expected every day come in, prices will be much lower.

WATERFORD, Nov. 26.—It is our pleasing duty to announce that our prospects, as regards a supply of provisions to this country are beginning to brighten, and that imports are daily arriving at our shores, which promise, both in cheapness and quantity, to dispel those gloomy apprehensions which have pervaded us for some time back. To-day Indian corn has, in our market, experienced a reduction of from 3s. to 4s. a barrel, in consequence of the arrival of over 20,000 barrels into our port since the publication, and the expectation of a considerably larger supply.

AFFAIRS OF EGYPT.

Cairo, November 3.

Our new Consul-General, the Hon. Charles Murray, presented his credentials to Mahomet Ali to-day. The ceremony was conducted and received privately by the Pasha at Alexandria, but, for reasons best known to the Viceroy himself, the Consul-Regent was prevented until the Court had taken up its winter residence at Cairo. Notice was given to the few English residents and visitors of Mr. Murray's intentions, and a carriage for the Consul-General and his suite and horses for the visitors were provided by the Pasha, a procession more numerous than brilliant was organised and paraded through the narrow streets of the city, from the Consulate to the palace of the Pasha. Mahomet Ali's vanity has been not a little tickled by the selection of a scion of a noble house for a British representative in Egypt, and has taken unusual honours were lavished on the occasion. A guard, consisting of 500 of his household troops, as well as a body of thirty cavalry, lancers and drawers, with stirrupers varied in hue and gaudy could make them, set out by men in showy turnished coats and jack-boots, were drawn up in front of the hotel. A band of Egyptian martial strains, relieved by drums and fifes after the manner of the English and Prussian service. Dragomans, with their silver-headed canes made a goodly show, and it only wanted the presence of one hundred of the tassels rate to complete the resemblance to a Lord Mayor's. At six o'clock Mr. Murray, accompanied by his brother, Captain Murray, of the Royal Navy, Mr. Walsh, the consulate, and popular Consul, and the dragoman on duty, entered the vice-regal carriage, and at the same moment the Regular visiters, and the Indians claiming to be English, mounted their steeds and prepared to move. But as many an honest man had ventured on a Turkish saddle and an Arab steed, the fine trappings of the cavalcade were soon disturbed, and horses found their way unmounted to the Pasha's stables. The spoon, sent, perhaps, to the Pasha, had shocked a very cavalier, had a busy time in landing helping hands in unsteady riders, and the poor Arabs, perhaps, had reason to deplore the rough treatment of their temporary masters.

At length the cavalcade was got off, and proceeded through the widest streets, about three yards wide, of Cairo, all the houses being filled with curious faces, and all open spaces incumbered with the people. Not a single of the inmates of the harems were to be recognised, though many no doubt peeped through their latices; but women of the lower classes, some half hiding their ugly faces, and others careless of the infidels' gaze, were abroad. The coffee-houses, thronged with lounging smokers, who scarcely laid aside their pipes to look at the order of the march; the barbers' stands full of customers to excess, and the Levantines', or foreign dealers' stores, in a blaze of light, proclaim the sight of the Consul-General, whose progress to arms at the various guardhouses near which he passed, and the porches of the mosques were garnished by Osmanlies devotees, no doubt cursing in their hearts the Christian dog who had not a single Turkish resident. After an hours' ride through the masses of Cairo, the procession reached the hill on which the citadel is located.

The hill is strongly fortified, and Mahomet Ali has more than once owed his safety to its impregnable position. The most remarkable for the splendid mosque—perhaps one of the most splendid in the world—which the Pasha has erected, and which has been building for twenty years, but which he delays to finish, because a popular prophet has said that his life will end the last stone being laid. The mosque is built of Egyptian marble, and is in really wonderful to behold, considering that it has been got up by native architects and workmen without the assistance of any hand plan, almost without measurement, and as it were only in imitation of other buildings of the same style. The view from the citadel is the finest in Egypt, and the Nile in its full extent and magnificence. You overlook an immense tract of the Lybian Desert—the Pyramids of Sakkara and Dashour, and the Nile in its mighty course, and the boundless inundation caused by its overflow this year. You see the squalid City beneath you as in a map, you can trace every quarter, and mark the site of each important mosque; and then you can repose the eye on the cultivated land, where range of Indian corn just ripe are in luxurious abundance.

The cavalcade having drawn up at the chief entrance of the palace, the Consul-General, his suite, the visitors, and a crowd of intruders, were forced together into the presence chamber, or long room, where the Pasha habitually receives; and all that the divans would hold being accommodated, and the rest being left in the outer apartments, the ceremony commenced. The Pasha was seated in the corner of the divan, the Consul-General on his right hand, and the Secretary, and Captain Murray next to his brother. Four pipes were introduced and handed to the Pasha and the persons I have named; and after a reasonable time had elapsed, coffee was served, and distributed to all the visitors: the honour of pipes being exclusively confined in the Consulate, and coffee only in the annual, a simple flask wast and fez, which are so becoming to a Turk, seemed in unusual good spirits. The lively conversation was carried on—the quickness of the interpreter being most remarkable—in which the Pasha indulged his vein of wit, and the French call amusants plaisanteries. The official business of the day was then despatched, Mr. Murray contenting himself to a few words of common place, assuring the Pasha of his Sovereign's desire to cultivate friendly and commercial relations with Egypt, and Mehemet Ali expressing his equal anxiety for the Consul-General to receive the representative of the British Sovereign and nation. The pipes were next remarked, and a few minutes sufficed for the Viceroy's order to the Consul-General, after which Mr. Murray took his leave, the Pasha rising from his seat, and the Consul-General
